Swachh Kumbh falls flat as thousands of toilets rendered non-functional on Day 1

Prayagraj, the government in Uttar Pradesh and the Centre have publicised the construction of over 1,20,000 toilets here on a large scale but their 'Swachh Kumbh' (clean Kumbh) — claims have seemingly fallen flat as thousands of these were rendered non-functional on the very first day of the mega spiritual, cultural and religious congregation.

"There is a special emphasis on cleanliness this time at the Kumbh Mela. People were compelled to defecate in the open due to absence of toilets in the previous years but this time 120,000 toilets have been built and double the number of sweepers will maintain cleanliness. The last Kumbh mela had only seen 34,000 toilets," the Kumbh administration said in a press release.

These claims are being aligned with Modi government's signature Swachh Bharat campaign and are being publicised extensively in advertisements, on hoardings here, as well as the media. However, on the very first 'Shahi Snan' (royal bath) that took place on Tuesday on the occasion of the auspicious Makar Sankranti, dozens of visitors could be seen defecating and relieving themselves in the open. Several such sights were witnessed in close proximity to the Sangam — the confluence of Ganga and Yamuna rivers and the mythical Saraswati — which is where the devotees are headed to take the holy dip. Why such a state of affairs despite Rs 4,200 crore of public money being spent for the Kumbh Mela — the costliest ever — by the UP government?

The presence of toilets all across the by-lanes of the city as well as near the bathing ghats is a welcome sign but most of them had turned non-functional due to shortage of water or being filthy unclean as they are, on Day 1 of the fair. The plastering and cementing in several toilets has also proved, making them completely non-functional.

According to officials about two crore devotees took the holy dip on the opening day but the official figures were contested by many. Much to public dismay, thousands of toilets failed to serve their purpose after the use by a handful of people. The reasons are unavailability of water, lack of cleaning staff and an apparent failure in planning. For instance, a vast majority of poor devotees, coming mainly from rural regions of the country, are headed directly to the bathing ghats. But the number of toilets in these areas are far lesser than those in the by-lanes of the city. Additionally, the cleaning staff complained that they were handed over multiple tasks such as cleaning the toilets, sweeping the floors and even chasing the stray animals simultaneously. In doing one thing, they missed the others, they complained.

Responding to an IANS query, Rajeev Rai, SDM Kumbh, admitted that there had been "a problem" and that they would be taking "corrective measures" to ensure cleanliness and hygiene on other significant dates that are expected to draw large number of devotees.

"I admit that toilets are not up to perfection in some regions but we are taking corrective measures. If need be, we will change the completely non-functional toilets that all preparations were made in barely one month time. Locals suggested that instead of focusing on large numbers, the administration could have done better by ensuring cleanliness in even half of the existing number of toilets. They pointed to the apathy of general Indian consciousness towards hygiene. "If there is one toilet and several people are to use it, they will all be cautious to leave it clean for the next user. But here we have a situation where there were more toilets than visitors arriving at the start. So nobody bothered and when toilets were actually required by public, they were too dirty to use," said one localite Himanshu Mishra.

Nokia to cut jobs, says slow 5G progress not cause for layoffs

Helsinki, Finnish telecommunication giant Nokia on Tuesday announced its plans to cut jobs, media reported.

Nokia gave 350 as a layoff target in Finland, and said the figures in France and Germany would be higher, but did not specify. However, the company denied that the cuts would be related to the slower than expected launch of 5G technology. Xinhua news agency reported. Instead, the aim is to make operations more efficient as the consolidation after the purchase of the French Alcatel-Lucent has been completed. Tommi Uitto, director in charge of Nokia's operations in Finland, said the changes are "necessary". The cutbacks are part of 700-million-euro (about $798.7 million) savings announced in October 2018. Thereafter Marc Rouanne, one of the key directors, left the company. In France, the General Confederation of Labour (CGT) accused Nokia on Tuesday of attempting to improve profitability through shifting work to countries where labour costs are lower than in France.

Finnish daily Helsingin Sanomat quoted the union as saying that Nokia has broken its 2016 promise to the then finance minister Emmanuel Macron that staff size at Alcatel-Lucent and Bell Labs would remain at 4,200 for two years.

CGT claimed that Nokia had also broken its pledge to employ 2,500 in France in research and development. Helsingin Sanoma's economics writer Petri Sajari said the French unions could turn the Nokia cutbacks against President Macron. Headquartered in Espoo, Finland, Nokia currently employs 100,000 people worldwide, 6,000 of them in Finland.
